An approach for defining the conceptual bases of administrative services in the agriculture of Ukraine is proposed. Investigated components of the concept of providing such services are revealed.

Administrative services, agriculture, conceptual framework.

The aim of the article is to develop a conceptual framework of administrative services in agriculture of Ukraine.

In almost all countries, agriculture is a priority sector, which objectively derived from exceptional importance and indispensability of agricultural production in human life and society. In Ukraine, the priority of this field is due the presence of a uniquely fertile land, natural conditions for agriculture. But, the availability of natural resources is not a determining factor in achieving an appropriate level of socio-economic development. More and more to the forefront the problem of effective management of existing and attract resources. Growing number of problems comes to the effective management of existing and attract resources.

The focus of our study is administrative services in the agricultural sector of Ukraine. This branch does not only affects the quality of life in rural areas, but it formes the basis of national food security.

The paper settles a position whereby the first step is to determine the nature and legal prerequisites for the formation of the Institute of administrative services in Ukraine in general and agriculture in Ukraine in particular.

In this regard it should be noted that the formation of Ukraine as a democratic state is defined such properties as mutual responsibility of the state and the citizens of the state focus on the rights and freedoms of man and citizen guaranteed by the Constitution of Ukraine and laws of the state's public participation in the governance process, the possibility of control by society over the actions of public authorities and others.

Effectiveness of building a democratic, legal and social state depends on finding and fixing the optimal model of governance.

Conceptual framework of administrative services in the field of agriculture, on the one hand, require further study, on the other - can appear a certain basis for developing institutional and legal framework of administrative services in various fields of agriculture.

However, the constructive using of the proposed concept in the provision of administrative services in agriculture may not appear only during the development of relevant administrative regulations, but also during the implementation of the principles of Ukraine Agricultural Policy of the European Union to ensure the efficiency of the agricultural sector of Ukraine, and, consequently, food security.
