The article considers the ecological culture of the lawyer as a component of professional and General culture of a lawyer as a person.

Culture, ecological culture, ecology, sustainable development, co-evolution.

Local and global environmental problems of today somehow related to humanity and its solution require significant economic and social efforts. Man and society in general have created problems that threaten the future existence of not only nature but also modern civilization.

Formulated in Rio de Janeiro in 1992 the position of the planetary community opened a new phase of development «sustainable development», which means harmonious development of compatible (co-evolution) society with its natural environment, the biosphere. The process of sustainable development should be a condition of maintaining the existing achievements of civilization and within the concept of direct efforts of mankind to preserve for future generations the place of our existence - the Earth.

Necessity awareness of the scientific world in the future of development mankind can only be solved with the use of a maximum capacity of ecological culture. This is the main mission of ecological culture - promoting reorientation man and mankind in planetary values: preservation of animate and inanimate nature.

The purpose of the article - to reveal the concept of ecological culture and ecological culture to determine the specificity of the lawyer's role and place in the practice of law.

The objective realities of modern life are pushing to the need for "greening" the economic and social aspects of life, correction of any activities and compliance with national and international standards and values, forming the necessary level of ecological culture. Defined fully applies to professional legal activity, which in turn is part of social activities.

Problems of ecological culture, environmental consciousness, ideology, and environmental components of the educational process in environmental culture studied by the humanities, natural sciences and engineering. However, the literature is not disclosed deontological aspects of ecological culture lawyer, not excluding those specific features of the culture that allows us to consider them as an effective means of forming property lawyer in ecological perspective.

Specificity of ecological culture lawyer is that it is an overall culture must have the full range of scientific knowledge and skills that allow to implement programs aimed at both environmental rights and obligations aimed at eliminating negative consequences regarding man - nature.

The concept of ecological culture stems from understanding the nature of human interaction and environment exist as a theoretical basis for the development of individual behaviors in the environment. Ecological culture - it's part of human culture as a combination of human achievement in the social, intellectual and entrepreneurial ways. Ecological culture based on scientific achievements on patterns of human interaction and the environment in terms of ensuring environmental safety and health development, improving mental and physical abilities of people in specific historical circumstances. Ecological culture as part of general culture must evolve spontaneously and not be forwarded purpose. It should be formed in all areas of life, otherwise it will cause not only destructive changes in the environment, but also become a threat and man and the environment. Forming concepts of ecological culture should be a student lawyer of the first steps towards a professional academic profession in the future. And these goals initially should serve as the subject of legal ethics as part of which should be in the formation of a lawyer's professional culture and ecological culture.
